HITLER IN PATAGONIA

It may take a long time to find out whether Hitler and his bride Eva Braun escaped to Patagonia. The country is a series of vast Nazi-owned ranches, where German is spoken almost exclusively and where Hitler could be hidden easily and successfully for years.

The ranches in this southern part of Argentina cover thousands of acres and have been under Nazi management for generations. Because of absolute German control, it would be impossible for any non-German to penetrate the area to make a thorough investigation as to Hitler's whereabouts.

Along the coast of Patagonia, many Germans own land which contains harbors deep enough for submarine landings. And if submarines could get to Argentine-Uruguayan waters from Germany, as they definitely did, there is no reason why they could not go a little farther south to Patagonia. Also there is no reason why Hitler couldn't have been on one of them.

Note—On December 15, 1943, this column reported that "Hitler's gang has been working to build up a place of exile in Argentina in case of defeat. After the fall of Stalingrad and then Tunisia, they began to see defeat staring them in the face. That was their cue to move in on Argentina." The same column also cited chapter and verse regarding German-trained officials who ruled the new Argentine dictatorship. At San Francisco, Nelson Rockefeller and Jimmy Dunn insisted that the U. S. A. recognize Argentina.

Note 2—If it ever comes to identifying Hitler, Dr. Robert Kempner, former German police official now living in Lansdowne, Pa., has the answers. Kempner, who was in charge of the investigation after Hitler's beer hall putsch, says that Hitler's right thumb is abnormally long, his right ear pointed on top and his mouth is very receding. Kempner has turned over his data to U. S. authorities.

MYSTERIOUS PEACE FEELERS

It's being kept very hush-hush, but something important is brewing behind the scenes regarding peace with Japan. Highest officials won't say a word about it, not even to some of their cabinet colleagues.

However, peace feelers which have come from the Japs have been much more than feelers—despite Secretary Grew's denials. One of them was debated by the combined chiefs of staff for more than a week. It proposed that the Japs withdraw from Korea and Manchuria and all China if (1) they could keep the emperor, and (2) they would not be invaded.

Meanwhile, Joe Grew and the army and navy have prepared a directive outlining the minimum terms we would accept from the Japs. This is one of the most highly guarded documents in the government. However, it can be stated on high authority that the Grew peace plan would permit the Japs to retain Emperor Hirohito.

It can also be stated that there is considerable difference of opinion inside the administration regarding the Grew memorandum, and some of his colleagues inside the state department, including Assistant Secretary Will Clayton and Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson, are vigorously opposed.

The whole situation is in a state of flux, and anything can happen overnight.

INSIDE JAPAN

¶ Jap workers are now being drilled for home defense at noon hours, some even using pointed sticks as spears.

¶ The Japanese railroads are being torn to pieces by B-29s. Rail junctions are clogged for days before traffic can clear through them.

¶ Jap prisoners taken in Burma, Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies haven't the ghost of an idea as to what is happening in Japan. They can't believe that U. S. forces are steaming close to the Jap mainland, still believe the Jap navy will reopen supply lines to the South Pacific.

¶ There is considerable debate inside the U. S. high command regarding the necessity for landing in China. Some think a Chinese invasion is necessary to protect our invasion flank when we land in the main Jap islands. Others believe a Chinese invasion would only use tight shipping and result in unnecessary casualties. The easiest way to aid China, they argue, is to defeat Japan quickly, not get bogged down with a long fight on the Chinese mainland.

¶ The entire Jap administrative system has broken down. The Japs have now decentralized their government so every area has its own war production board, its own local defense system, even its own local tax collections.

¶ We have also mined Jap harbors so Jap merchant vessels can hardly get through. . . . Despite the claims of cleaning up northern Luzon, stiff fighting continues. The Japs are beaten but they don't know it. They are still making things tough for MacArthur's men—despite official communiques.

He leisurely looted the cash box and took $150 from Ourique's wallet and $70 from the patrons, Mr. and Mrs. Escalon Reis of Campbell, as reported by the proprietor to Deputy Sheriffs Dan Pasetta and William Salt.

A FREE PRESS

The birth of the free press in America, which occurred in 1735, was definitely linked to the birth of the American Republic in 1776.

It was on August 4, 1735, that the famous trial of John Peter Zenger, editor of the New York Weekly Journal, began. He was charged with seditious libel criticizing the Colonial government and had been jailed.

Zenger was not only acquitted, but there, for the first time in world history, the freedom of the press was clearly established. Gouveneur Morris declared that the acquittal verdict was "the dawn of that liberty which afterward revolutionized America."

That trial also revolutionized Colonial law. It helped to establish the right of jurors to judge for themselves the law and the facts. Thereafter a defendant's fate did not rest solely in the hands of a judge.

Today the world press, wherever it is comparatively free, is waging a mighty battle against the encroachment of arbitrary censorship and against those forces which seek to control the dissemination of news in order to distort or color it for selfish reasons.

Only as this fight is carried on unceasingly can the press maintain itself as a power for genuine world freedom and human betterment.

THE REDMAN EATS

If U. S. diplomatic service needs a genius, Chief Spotted Crow, of the South Dakota Sioux, may be the man. Foreseeing rationing, he loaned buffalo to a State park, on a duration "interest" arrangement. Last week his tribesmen feasted on an interest payment—the meat of three buffalo, point-free. The State feeds 'em; the Sioux eat 'em. Smart man, that Spotted Crow!

Help knock Japan out of the war — with War Bonds.

GUADALCANAL TO TOKYO

With giant naval rifles of the biggest fleet in history battering on the very door of Tokyo, and with hundreds of thousands of troops getting set for an invasion of the Jap homeland, it is hard to realize that only three short years ago a handful of American Marines, backed by a scant naval force, began the first offensive action against the Nips.

That was the landing on Guadalcanal and it came on August 7, 1942. On that day three years—and 3,000 miles—ago, the news of the invasion of that tiny island created far greater excitement than the massive assaults now being dealt by sea and air against the punch-drunk Japanese.

Then we were starved for favorable news from the Pacific. Early in that year we had had to digest the bitter defeats at Bataan, Corregidor, Singapore, Borneo and Java. Our fleet had stopped the enemy in the battle of the Coral Sea and at Midway, but up to that time we had been unable to take a single step toward regaining territory overrun by the Nips.

The battle of Guadalcanal was insignificant as compared to current operations, but it was no less important. Our victories of today have their roots in the reconquest of that dot of land.

Prior to August 7, 1942, few of us had ever heard of Guadalcanal. Now none of us will ever forget it.

MR. ATTLEE'S BIG JOB

Clement Attlee, Britain's new Prime Minister, and other members of the Labor Party were just as surprised, reports say, as anyone else at the smashing victory Labor won in the recent general election.

But Mr. Attlee is unquestionably well aware that the vote was not a personal tribute to him, any more than it was an indication that Winston Churchill is no longer generally liked. The election was one of issues rather than men. The British people want relief at the earliest possible time from the severe restrictions under which they have lived since 1939. They want better housing, more household goods, including such simple things as cooking utensils. They felt they could get these things more quickly under Mr. Attlee than under Mr. Churchill.

That places Mr. Attlee on the well-known "spot." He will be expected to produce. If he is unable to do this he may find that his government will be voted out of office at the next general election in five years.

What some of the British voters may not appreciate is that by changing governments they have not changed the factors which, at present, are creating a bottleneck on civilian production. The main problem is the labor shortage. Coal is scarce and transportation equipment lacking. Furthermore, the Attlee government is committed to giving full support to the war against Japan. This means that much of the country's productive capacity must be devoted to war output—approximately 60 per cent of the top production.

Yes, Mr. Attlee won a smashing victory, but he also won a gigantic headache. We wish him well.

GET GOING

Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson is reported to have laid down the gauntlet to representatives of other Allied powers telling them to either get going with the actual prosecution of the big war criminals or that the United States would undertake it alone. Since we hold the biggest bag of Nazidom's ex-big shots we're in a position to carry out the threat.

The discussions of the War Crimes Commission have dragged on far past the time that Jackson hoped to get the trials under way. He is said to be insisting that aggressive warfare—such as economic aggression and the massing of troops along borders to enforce demands—be defined as an international crime.

At any rate, it is high time that the men who engineered German's assault against humanity be brought to justice.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

WHAT a heritage for Rita Hayworth's baby! Everybody knows, of course, that little Rebecca's mother is one of the most successful and most popular of all our feminine stars, and that her father, Orson Welles is a remarkable young man (too remarkable sometimes!) in many fields—writing, acting, producing. But Rebecca's heritage is a matter of generations famous in the theater.

That baby's great-grandfather on the distaff side is the great Antonio Cansino, one of the famous dancers of all time. The story of his life and of the 16 children he begot, and of his grandchildren, is one of the fascinating sagas of the theater.

Nearly 70 years ago a 12-year-old boy was left an orphan in a little Spanish village. His father had been a well-to-do land owner; but there were crooked lawyers in Spain even then, as everywhere else, and the boy found himself done out of his inheritance and left penniless to face the world. That boy was Antonio Cansino.

Out on His Own

Antonio set out for Seville, and there he found himself a job as helper to a blacksmith. Little Antonio liked to dance, and to play the guitar. When night came Antonio struck out for the water front cafes, and there he danced again—for pennies.

At that time the famous Imperia and her rival, La Companara, were having their heyday, and there was a popular male dancer. Fernando Feliz. Young Antonio sneaked into the wings to watch their performances and in time made their acquaintance. He had an ingratiating manner, and before long he was having lessons from all three of them.

Starting Up the Ladder

So at 15 Antonio said goodby to his forge. A theater manager had seen him dance and had recognized a rising star. Within a year Antonio was famous throughout Spain. He had a house of his own, servants and a carriage. At 17 he married. At 18 he was a father.

A London producer happened to be visiting Spain and watched Antonio Cansino at a performance in Madrid. He offered a contract for a month's engagement in London at a figure that couldn't be turned down. The month was extended to a year, and by that time Antonio was reaping a fortune. Paris followed and then tours of Europe and South America.

As the Cansino fortune grew, the family was growing, too. At the age of 35 Antonio had no less than 10 children. He was rich and his wife and children wanted him at home. To the chagrin of theatrical managers, he announced his retirement from the stage.

Never Too Young

All of the Cansino children were taught to dance by their father almost as soon as they could walk. Young dancers begged Cansino for instruction, so he opened a school in Madrid. When Diaghiley took the Ballet Russe to the Spanish capital several of the stars took lessons from Cansino, among them Leonide Massine.

The Cansino children all enjoyed great success. They toured Europe, Africa, North and South America, Australia. Edouardo, Rita Hayworth's father, took Latin America by storm. Antonio II was a sensation in Europe and Australia. Jose, Angel, Paco, Elissa, and the others all had their share of triumphs.

California, Here We Come

When Rita was 16 she came to California with her parents, the Edouardo Cansinos. The movie bug got her, but good. She danced and played bit parts in dozens of pictures, and then came her big chance in "Blood and Sand," opposite Tyrone Power. You know the rest of that story. Her father and mother have been retired from the stage for some years, and Rita's father is now working at Douglas because he has two sons at the front.

And now the first Antonio, the patriarch of them all, is here. He lost house and fortune during the Spanish revolution.

And do you know what he's looking forward to? You guessed it—it's the day when little Rebecca is big enough to take her first dancing lesson from her great-granddaddy.

Did I say that baby has a heritage!

And did I say there's a movie in the histoire Cansino? All right, I leave it to you — and to the first smart producer that gets the same idea.

* * *

And Why Not?

When Joe E. Brown was decorated in Manila by General MacArthur with the Philippine service ribbon, the general said that it was the first time the honor had been given a civilian. Immediately after receiving it, Brown left for Okinawa and Iwo Jima. This is his fourth trip overseas. . . . Ida Lupino gets what she wants—Ray Milland in "Lady 17," with Lewis Allen directing at Paramount. . . . Joan Fontaine didn't want to do comedy, but "The Affairs of Susan" is one of her best.

So Clever

By ALICE WRIGHT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Features.

SATSUMA strutted on his bantam legs as he worked about the hedges of the park close to the great shipyards. So clever! Many things could be concealed among the lowly tools, and many too beneath the humble guise of a gardener. But no temporary abasement was too much when it was for the glory of the Rising Sun. None—not even the killing of one's own brother.

It had been so easy to be smuggled into the barbarians' country and make his way to where lived his brother Mitsuna in this midwestern city of shipbuilding along the muddy river. A swift rip of the knife, a note of resignation to the Yankee capitalist who had employed Mitsuna as yard boy, and Satsuma became Mitsuna, a naturalized citizen of the United States whose record was faultless in the eyes of the investigators.

He spat venomously as he recalled the large, lazy man with so sharp eyes who pretended to enjoy the park the while he was observing Satsuma. But Satsuma was too smart to be caught off guard and, by ways known to himself, he had discovered that the man, also disguised in humble dress, was Lieutenant Roland Mason of Naval Intelligence.

As the morning wore on he began to wish that Lieutenant Mason would appear. It would be so good to fool him with his new ruse, to look so stupid while knowing he was being so clever. His shears clipped sharply along the hedge, his bright little eyes intently watching the entrance to the park.

Ah! The lazy-looking one had entered and seated himself on a bench across the lagoon. It took Satsuma over half an hour to move toward him, methodically clipping as if oblivious to the other's presence. Satsuma had patience. If Lieutenant

Ah! The lazy-looking one had entered and seated himself.

Mason should decide to speak he would halt and prattle in the loose American fashion though he would be guiding the conversation to an objective. If not, he would continue on his way and await another opportunity.

"Nice day." Lieutenant Mason's voice was as lazy as he pretended to be, and his eyes regarded Satsuma dully.

Satsuma straightened, a mask of stolidity slipping over his features. "Very nice," he said in careful English. He could not resist adding, "You visit often."

"I like the view. Don't you?"

Satsuma gazed around the park, carefully avoiding the yards. "Much work," he shrugged.

"It helps to keep up appearances." Mason idly tapped the newspaper he was holding. "You Chinese are making it plenty tough for the monkey-men."

Although his spirit writhed under the double insult Satsuma was too wary to let the lieutenant know his barb had hit home. "I am good American citizen." He smiled blandly and bent to resume his work.

Now was the time to let the picture work itself out of his pocket. The lieutenant would rise to the bait.

The fact that he and his brother looked much alike had made Satsuma's precaution simple. He had secured a car of the same make and year as Mitsuna's, had pored over the records at the courthouse to get the correct license number, and had manufactured a plate of that same year. Then, a snapshot of himself in front of the automobile with the license showing.

At last the photograph fell from his pocket, and Satsuma moved slowly on his way. He barely concealed a triumphant grin as he saw the slow one move swiftly for it and examine it with so sharp eyes before he called in his slow voice, "You dropped something!"

"Ah yesss! Thank you so much." Satsuma returned with a gleam of something akin to pleasure in his bright little eyes. As he held out his hand to take the picture the cold bite of metal snapped over his wrist.

"So sorry!" Lieutenant Mason's voice crackled. "You Japs are so good at copying. Too bad! But in Missouri in 1943 the licenses were only small tags set over the outdated large metal ones which you have taken the pains to reproduce. You see, the metal we saved that way has long been flying over Tokyo."

Peggy Starr Weds Jesse McFarland In Long Beach

The following description of the wedding of Irene Lela Starr, known as Peggy Starr will be of interest to her former classmates of the class of 1936 of the Campbell Union High school and other friends of the family, made when they lived here.

Miss Peggy Starr wore white marquisette when she became the bride of Jesse G. McFarland Jr. of Long Beach. The wedding took place at the Village Church in Long Beach with the Rev. M. R. Hall officiating before an altar decorated with white gladioli, yellow dahlias and candelabra.

Miss Starr's gown was styled with a fitted bodice, boufant skirt and train. A fingertip veil completed the wedding ensemble. She wore the benedict's gift to her, a pearl necklace and pearl earrings and carried a colonial bouquet of white and pink roses, white carnations and gardenias. Everett Starr of Los Angeles gave his sister in marriage.

Attending her twin sister as matron of honor was Mrs. Elizabeth Lewis of Long Beach. William D. Smith performed the duties of best man and ushers were Earle T. McFarland, Ensign, USN, the benedict's brother, and Clarence C. Van Veckhoven of Los Angeles.

After the ceremony the bridal couple was honored at a reception at the home of Mrs. H. P. Chaffe in Long Beach, after which they left for a honeymoon in Sequoia National Park.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Lela Starr of Los Angeles, attended San Jose State college and was employed in San Jose and Long Beach before her marriage. The groom, son of Commander and Mrs. Jesse G. McFarland Sr. of San Diego, attended San Diego State college and the Wright Aeronautical Institute. He is now employed in the engineering division of a Southern California aircraft company. The couple will make their home in Long Beach.

Pfc. Claud R. Hutchingson of Campbell was with the 94th infantry when the Marauder Division infantrymen broke out of the Saar River bridgehead and reached the Rhine river in the vicinity of Ludwigshafen.

A marriage license was issued to Theodore R. Hooper, 22, of San Jose, and Evelyn Enos Machado, 19, of Campbell.

Frank Coupland has sold his home property on West Rincon avenue and purchased the George Morris house and orchard on Hamilton avenue opposite Central avenue where they expect to be domiciled in about a week. Mr. Morris has gone to San Francisco to make his home with a daughter.

USS Hornet Now At Hunters Point

After fifteen months of almost continuous war patrols and task force assignments west of Pearl Harbor, the USS Hornet, one of Uncle Sam's mighty fleet of giant carriers, is back in the United States for major overhaul at the Navy's Hunters Point drydocks in San Francisco Bay.

Chief reason for the return of the Hornet to the West Coast now is the fact that the veteran ship sustained severe damage to her forward flight deck in a typhoon off Japan a few weeks ago.

According to Hunters Point authorities, the Hornet's repairs, which include repair of storm damage, general overhaul of engines, guns and deck equipment and repainting of the whole ship, will require over 1,000,000 man hours of work, or 110,000 man-days on a nine hour basis. Cost of the "full speed and urgent" repair job is estimated at $2,200,000.

The twin destroyer escorts, the USS Wintle and the USS Duffy, also are now undergoing routine repairs at Hunters point after 22 months of nearly identical duty in the South Pacific.

The 1300-ton vessels were constructed simultaneously at the Mare Island Navy Yard. The Wintle was commissioned July 10, 1943, and the Duffy August 5, 1943.

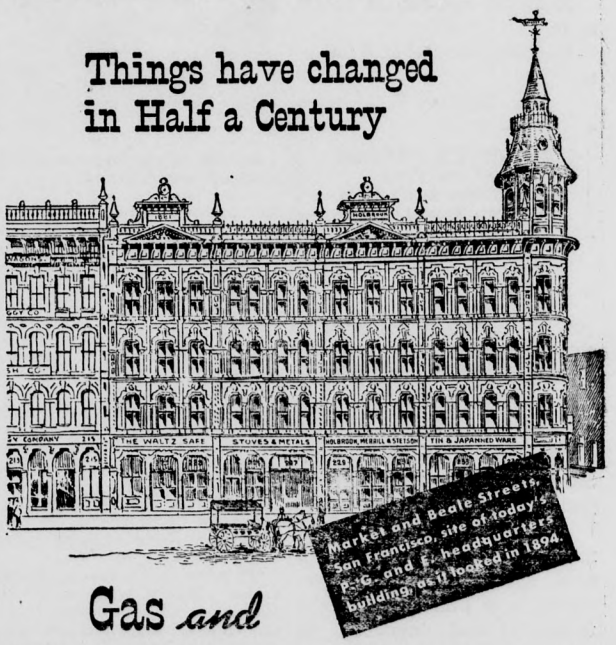
Things have changed in Half a Century



Gas and Electricity are Cheaper, too

	1894	1945
GAS	$18.40	$2.59
ELECTRICITY	$13.49	$2.28

One Month's Bill for Present Average Use

FIFTY YEARS AGO the corner of Market and Beale Street, where the 17-story P. G. and E. General Office Building now stands, was occupied by the Holbrook Building, built in 1881.

Market Street was paved with cobblestones over which horse-drawn trucks and cabs rattled and rumbled. Cable cars clanged their way down the center of the street. The little Sutter Street trailer car, hauled by a team of half-broken horses, jogged down to the ferry building on the outside track. Those were the horse and buggy days.

Most of San Francisco's streets and homes were lighted with gas. Coal and wood were in general use for heating and cooking. Electricity was used in few homes and only for lighting. Modern appliances—automatic refrigerators, electric toasters, roasters, irons, washers and other electric wonder-workers of today were unknown.

In 1894 both gas and electric services were expensive luxuries compared to the low rates charged today as shown by these typical bills:

	1894	1945
GAS 4,600 cubic feet, the average monthly domestic consumption in San Francisco today	$18.40	$2.59
ELECTRICITY 71 kilowatt hours, present monthly average for domestic use	$13.49	$2.28

The "good old days" were not all good. Half a century of progress has brought countless advantages to the people of this generation, not the least of which are cheap, dependable electric and natural gas service, and a great variety of convenient, efficient labor and time-saving appliances.
